CROWN & CURIOSITY

W.G. CREAMER

Postal-Scale Inkstand

Brass, Eastlake · Covers signed Creamer NY · Circa 1884

A well-kept Victorian desk held more than a pen. It held ink, paper, and a way of weighing a letter before it went to the post: a small ceremony, repeated every time a note was sent.

This set was made to do all of that work in one place: a brass double inkstand in the Eastlake taste, with a working postal scale, a pull-out letter-box drawer, three top compartments, two crystal inkwells, a pen holder, and the original weights.

The covers are signed Creamer NY, for W.G. Creamer, about 1884. It might have sat on a New York desk, where a letter was written, weighed, and made ready for the post.

A desk already equipped for someone who still likes to write — a quiet ritual of correspondence, kept alive.

~ A curiosity, chosen for you ~

CROWNANDCURIOSITY.COM