NAPIER

Sterling Stepped Jigger

Sterling silver · Four steps, ½ to 2 ounces · 1930s

A jigger is a small, exacting instrument: a way of measuring a pour so that a cocktail comes out as it was meant to, every time.

This one is sterling silver, in a four-step Art Deco form by the Napier Company, beginning in the 1930s. The exterior steps are stamped for half an ounce, one ounce, one and a half ounces, and two ounces. The base is marked STERLING and NAPIER PAT. PEND., and it has a smooth, round loop handle.

It might have stood at a 1930s bar, measuring a pour before dinner, or for the first cocktail of a long evening.

A precise pour, in silver — a little ceremony from another era, now yours to keep and use.
